

Capital Markets Snapshot

Prepared by LSW Financial

Week ending October 13, 2023

Earnings reports and inflation metrics were the focus this week as both the September Producer Price Index (PPI) and Consumer Price Index (CPI) were released. While the headline and core PPI number came in slightly higher than anticipated, the annual core CPI number continues to trend lower falling to 4.1% from 4.3% in August. Despite this positive news on the inflation front, rising tensions in the Middle East and a disappointing University of Michigan Consumer Sentiment survey weighed on the equity markets.

Fixed Income Markets Overview

- Treasury yields fell slightly this week but remain near their highs for the year.
- The release of the September FOMC minutes on Wednesday reflected a divided committee with some members believing one more rate hike could take place, while others felt another move was not necessary. However, the committee agreed rates should “stay restrictive for some time.”
- As of Friday, the odds of the FOMC keeping rates unchanged at the November 1st meeting rose to 93% according to CME Fedwatch Tool. This was up from 73% one week earlier.

Alternative Markets Overview

- Tensions in the Middle East and tighter U.S. sanctions against Russian oil exports put pressure on the price of oil. The price per barrel was higher by more than $5.00 for the week.
- International concerns also led investors in a "flight to quality." This resulted in an uptick in the price of gold, which was up by 3% as of Friday. Prices of silver and platinum were also up for the week.
