

Capital Markets Snapshot

Prepared by LWS Financial

Week ending October 6, 2023

A surprising September non-farm payroll report on Friday reflected strong U.S. job growth without increasing wage pressures. The markets initially had a negative reaction to the headline payroll number of 336,000 jobs, but rallied back after a deeper look into the report showed slowing wage pressure with a monthly increase of just 0.2%. Several economists stated this may be the “soft landing” the Federal Reserve has been hoping for, but further data will need to be monitored to see if the trend continues.

Fixed Income Markets Overview

- U.S. Treasury yields were higher following Friday's jobs report with the 30-year yield breaking above 5.00% before pulling back.
- Despite the recent rise in rates, the yield curve remains inverted with the spread between the 2- and 10-year U.S. Treasury at -29 basis points as of Friday.
- As of the close of the week, the CME Fedwatch Tool showed a 72% chance of the FOMC keeping rates steady at their November 1st meeting.
