Week ending May 12, 2023

Concerns over the U.S. debt ceiling limit weighed on the markets this week as the meeting between President Biden and Congressional leaders produced no results on Tuesday and a Friday meeting was postponed. While the actual debt ceiling limit was reached on January 19th, the Treasury has been covering expenditures since that time. Treasury officials and the Congressional Budget Office have both stated that the U.S. Government may not be able to pay its debts in June if the limit is not increased by the June 1st deadline.

Fixed Income Markets Overview

- The yield inversion between the 2- and 10-year U.S. Treasuries has remained in a tight range, it closed the week with a difference of -52 basis points.
- The key economic news of the week was the April Consumer Price Index (CPI) which slowed slightly to 4.9% from the previous reading of 5.0%. While still above the Fed's target of 2.0%, the reading marked the 10th month of consecutive declines.
- The University of Michigan Consumer Sentiment index dropped to a six-month low this week and included consumers' outlook on inflation. Participants in the survey raised their estimates of long-term inflation to 3.2%, which is the highest level in 12 years.

Equity Markets Overview

- The equity markets saw a repeat of last week with a small positive return in the Nasdaq while the S&P and DJIA both saw losses.
- Only two of the S&P sectors were positive for the week - Communication Services (+4.3%) and Consumer Discretionary (+0.6%). Several sectors were unchanged, while Energy (-2.1%) and Materials (-2.0%) saw the biggest losses.
- Earnings season is starting to wind down, but the past week saw positive earnings reports from Six Flags and Robinhood Markets but disappointing earnings from Tyson Foods and Fox Corp. Disney's earnings exceeded estimates but reports of declining Disney+ subscribers significantly weighed on the stock this week.
