

Capital Markets Snapshot

Prepared by LWS Financial

Week ending September 29, 2023

The equity markets were under pressure in the final week of the quarter due in part to higher oil prices and fears of a U.S. government shutdown. One bright spot of economic news was the Federal Reserve's favored inflation metric, the August Personal Consumption Expenditures (PCE) Price Index which came in with an increase of only 0.1%, the smallest monthly gain in almost three years. On an annual basis, the core CPE Index, which excludes gasoline and food, increased by 3.9%, the lowest annual increase in two years.

Fixed Income Markets Overview

- Yields continued to climb higher this week with the 10-year U.S. Treasury breaking above 4.5% for the first time in 15 years.
- The rise in yields continues to put upward pressure on mortgage rates. Last week, the 30-year mortgage rate was at 7.31% according to Freddie Mac, the highest level since 2000.
- The U.S. Census Bureau reported that new home sales fell 8.7% in August, while the Mortgage Bankers Association (MBA) saw a 1.3% decline in mortgage applications last week. The MBA noted that the current level of applications is 27% below last year's level.

Alternative Markets Overview

- Oil continued to climb higher this week, with West Texas Intermediate (WTI) reaching $95.00 per barrel on Thursday before pulling back slightly. This price increase came on news that supplies at a key U.S. storage facility fell to its lowest level in a year.
- Gold fell on Friday, closing out a negative quarter for the precious metal on concerns over a higher interest rate environment. The price of silver was also down for the quarter.
- On Thursday, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) announced that it was again postponing decisions on several Bitcoin ETFs.
